A Letter from the Owners of Villa Colina

Dear Future Owner,

Hola, and welcome to Villa Colina. We are Eva and Andy Dobrov, and for the past six years this house has been our happy place. Before you make it yours, we wanted to share a little of its story, and ours.

When we bought Villa Colina, we fell for what you are probably feeling right now: the views, the light, the easy beauty of Sayulita just a few steps to the beach. We knew it was special. What we didn't know was how much it would come to mean to us, our family, and the many friends we have hosted here.

Villa Colina is more than a beautiful house; it is a work of art. It was designed by renowned architect Miguel Valverde, whose work also includes an oceanfront home for the President of Mexico. The artwork throughout was curated by the home's former owner, an artist, and it gives every room its own character.

Villa Colina has truly been a labor of love. Honestly, caring for it has been the best job I've ever had. I brought my background in marketing to every corner of the property, looking for ways to make each stay a little better and each detail a little more thoughtful.

I have always seen my job as keeping Villa Colina authentic while making it extremely comfortable for our guests. Its architecture, its art and its natural beauty were never things to change, only to frame. We hope you'll feel that the moment you walk in.

Our guests have made this journey a joy. As Superhosts, we set out to give every visitor a beautiful experience, and they have rewarded us with their kind words and their return visits. Today, Villa Colina is the highest-rated property in Sayulita, ranking in the top 1% of rental homes on both Airbnb and Vrbo.

Those ratings reflect more than a lovely house. They reflect a place where people celebrate, rest, reconnect with family, and leave wishing they could stay longer. Reading their notes has been one of the great pleasures of our lives.

Life brings new chapters. Andy is retiring, our twin sons have recently graduated from university, and the time has come for us to pass Villa Colina on. It is not an easy goodbye, but it is a hopeful one.

We are looking for someone who will love this home the way we have. Whether you plan to welcome guests, keep it as a family retreat, or both, you are inheriting a house with a proven story and a lot of happy memories in its walls.

Thank you for considering Villa Colina. We hope it becomes your happy place, too.

Muchas gracias,

Eva & Andy Dobrov
